More beer at Redhook

PORTSMOUTH -- Due to the increasing popularity of its ales, Redhook Ale Brewery said it will install four new fermentation tanks at its Pease International Tradeport facility on Friday, March 30. The installation will commence at 10 a.m.

This is Redhook's second expansion in the last year as it tries to keep up with high demand for its range of beers.

All are invited to come witness the brewery raise the roof and install the tanks.

Each tank holds four brews totaling 16,600 gallons each and weighs almost 120,000 pounds each when full of Redhook ales.

Each tank will arrive via a special low-ride trailer. The trailer routes required planning and permits to accommodate weight loads and low overpasses from Missouri to New Hampshire.

Redhook is expected to finish construction quickly.

In addition to more beer, the brewery will also feature a full schedule of events and concerts throughout the summer season.

Check Redhook's Web site at www.redhook.com for regular updates on show times. Redhook is located at 35 Corporate Drive at Pease International Tradeport.
